Learning To Identify Questions That Could Shut Down a Claim

In today's ever-changing world, adjusters and employers are faced with new challenges when obtaining records via a HIPPA release form or subpoenas, knowing when to conduct Social Media Investigations, and knowing the best questions to ask during an initial interview. You will learn ways to find evidence using unusual sources, the right way to secure the evidence, and obtain the questions to answers that you never thought needed to be asked before. In addition, you will have a complete understanding of data mining on social media sites and, more importantly, how to use that data to help formulate questions and develop fact-based decision-making abilities. Then using that information, we will discuss how to acquire accurate records to either mitigate or close the claim. With the aid of recent case studies, your presenters will bring energy and humor to this fast-moving presentation, one that you do not want to miss.

Down to a Science - The CSU Approach to COVID-19

Dealing with COVID-19 in the workplace is our new reality. As we begin our next phase of the pandemic—post-vaccination, anti-viral treatments, and boosters—no one is exactly sure what may lie ahead in the months and years to come. We need to be ready for the uncertainty COVID-19 brings to the workplace as an industry. With close to 50,000 employees and 23 campuses, California State University had a daunting challenge in mitigating this risk. Please join our presenters, who will discuss and break down how CSU applied science, pragmatism, and elbow grease in formulating effective methods that significantly reduced the spread of COVID-19, including steps taken upon re-opening campuses.

Get the Latest on COVID-19 in the Workplace

Learn about the presumptions of compensability under the Labor Code's newly enacted statutes addressing COVID-19. Whether or not there is presumption, you still need to defend the case, and we'll show you how. You'll learn what constitutes an outbreak and the reporting requirements by the employer, insurance carrier, or TPA. We will discuss the process from the inception of the claim and how to handle the issues that come your way. Can you deny? When can you deny it? Does notice of COVID-19 equate to notice of claim? How many days do you have to investigate a COVID-19 claim? What about first responders? All this and more in an easy-to-understand presentation.

Why Self-Insured? The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly Truth!

Self-insured employers need to be engaged in the management of their programs to understand better why certain claim decisions are made and the actual costs of their programs. Our discussion will take this one step further to assist in your education on the management of your program. Attendees will learn:

- What to look for when choosing your claims team.
- Is it better to self administer or utilize a TPA?
Which scenario is best for you.

Out Front Ideas Live: Workers' Compensation
Challenges and Opportunities for 2022

Talent Challenges and Workers' Compensation

With over 3 million fewer people in the workforce than two years ago, talent shortages are one of the most significant issues facing American businesses. Throughout the pandemic, the profound changes in the workplace created a new set of talent attraction and retention challenges, with more employees expecting flexibility in their work environment. It also creates risk management challenges associated with inadequate staffing and employee turnover. In this live "Out Front Ideas" event, Kimberly George and Mark Walls lead a discussion focused on overcoming these workforce challenges.

Alliance of Women
IN WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Pre Conference Event:

April 27, 2022

Join us as Kendra Davies, Keynote speaker, talks to us about Growth Mindset. What do resilience, confidence, and curiosity all have in common? They are all the byproducts of cultivating a growth mindset. Those who actively seek a growth mindset: bounce back quicker from negative or challenging situations;

They do not define themselves by what they do, but rather how they move through the process of doing, building, creating and living; They remain a student and seek the beginners mind allowing curiosity to drive how react and resolve issues. As a result, these folks are more likely to have higher rates of job satisfaction, to get promoted, and lead high performing teams.

In this session we will unpack what growth mindset is, take a deeper dive into the roots of our fixed mindsets, and explore strategies to shift towards a growth mindset.
